THE SUBJECT OF IRRIGATION.

What Could be Done in Sierra Valley With the Assistance of Capital.

The Seirra Valley Leader says:

The attention of capitalists is hereby called to some good investments for their surplus wealth in this valley. We speak of irrigating schemes. There is at least a hundred thousand acres of land in this valley, susceptable of producing the finest crops of hay and grain if a little more moisture could be had during a short portion of the year. Most of this land would produce an occasional crop during favorable years, but the uncertainity of it has deterred people from cultivating it. A very little water at the right time, would insure a full crop every season, as the quality of the soil cannot be excelled. There is enough water annually going to waste in the Spring to irrigate the whole valley twice over, if it could only be retained in reservoirs until two months later in the season. There is at least a dozen streams pouring their waters into the valley, from the surrounding hills, and scarcely one, which somewhere in its course in the mountains could not be dammed and a little lake formed, whose waters could be held, to be utilized in June. In Craycroft Neck, a dam could be constructed to hold in reserve enough water to irrigate at least 40,000 acres of land. This would reclaim all of the waste land on the west side of the valley, down as far as Beckworth. The little Truckee irrigating canal could be extended so that water could be carried nearly to the Summit. Thus we see that by these three schemes alone the whole valley could be watered, and scarcely an acre but what would produce its bushels of grain or tons of hay. There is not a raucher in the valley who would not give a dollar an acre to have his waste land irrigated. Here is a fortune for capitalists who are seeking a safe investment for their money. Land can be acquired under the desert land act, which capital can secure for a song. Then they can conduct water upon it, making it productive; divide it into small tracts and sell it to those in search of homes. The land would be quadrupled in value, and the profits to be realized from the investment would be enormous. The surplus wealth deposited in the banks of this State could find no safer outlet. We hope before long to see these plans for the improvement of our valley fully executed.

Tuscarora Mines

The Mining News says "the Navajo is looking well in all the workings and the little mine that has been the medium of restoring life to our mining district will long continue to contribute to Nevada's bullion product. It has not yet reached its zenith, as future bullion shipments will determine. Belle Isle is yielding it usual amount and grade of ore and gives promise of a change for the better. North Belle Isle shows no material change. A drift will be run north from the east crosscut 110 feet or to that point where the ore body is known to exist. The crosscuts and levels are being vigorously forwarded and ore discoveries may take place at any time. There is no change in Independence worthy of mention. Work, however, is progressing rapidly.

Grand Prize and Argenta are both looking decidedly well and the prospect for both could not be brighter. The work in both properties is in good milling ore and is being vigorously forwarded. The outlook along the entire line is flattering and of a nature to buoy up the hope regarding the future that has sustained and encouraged us."

Pacific Coast Canned Goods.

The Boston Advertiser, commenting on the benefits to be derived there from increased facilities of shipment from the Pacific Coast of fruits and vegetables, thinks that only the perishable nature of the goods prevents successful competition with Florida and other Southern points, but the case is different with preserved fruits, canned vegetables and dairy products, and that the time is almost within sight when the Pacific Coast will compete with the entire country in all these matters, and greatly to the advantage of consumers everywhere.

Mr. Dana of the New York Sun has a very keen sense of humor. He is now in Los Angeles with a party of which ex-Lieutenant Governor Dorsheimer is a member. When asked by a reporter who would be the next President, the distinguished journalist said, mysteriously: "Well, that lies between Mr. Dorsheimer and myself. I will tell you, but do not publish it, that is the meaning of this tour. We are quietly canvassing the country as to our relative strength."

How to Avoid Drunkenness.

Forbid intoxicating nostrums and use Parker's Ginger Tonic in your family This delicious remedy never intoxicates, is a true blood and brain food, and aiding all the vital functions never fails to invigorate.

You can keep your hair abundant and glossy, and retain its youthful color, with Parker's Hair Balsam.

"RESTING BY AND BY."

BY S. E. LOWELL.

There will be resting by and by,
Resting that's calm and sweet,
Rest for the toiling heart and brain,
Rest for the weary feet,
Rest from earth's tumult and its strife,
Its turmoil and its sin,
When through the gates of Paradise
Our souls have entered in.

Rest from all pain and blighting care,
All sorrow and all fears,
The hand shall drop its burden there,
The eye forget its tears!
For Love's pure light shall rule supreme,
Reflected from God's face,
And not a shadow o'er our hearts
Shall find a resting place.

O, for the broad and restful plains
Of Heaven's supernal day!
Where the glad spirit, tireless, fleet,
Shall wing its joyous way.
O, for the bright, unending smile
That lights that land of Rest,
No cloud shall dim, no storm shall mar
That home where all are blest!

—Portland Transcript.

SAVAGE JUSTICE.

A Bad Indian Decapitated and His Body Burned by His Tribe.

A Eureka dispatch, of the 14th, relates the annexed:

For some years there has been an Indian called Tybo Frank ranging about this section of the country. He was looked upon as a terror among his people, and three years ago killed another member of his tribe. He also had a longing for the horses of white men. The Indians, being greatly annoyed by Frank, determined to get rid of him, and three weeks ago held a council on Ruby Hill to devise means for that end. Four braves were appointed as executioners. They invited Frank to go on a hunt with them, and when 14 miles from Eureka, while sitting around a camp-fire, one of the braves caught Frank by the hair and pulled him on the ground, while another brave, with a large knife, jumped upon the victim and cut his head off. His body and head were then thrown on the fire and burned. The braves then made their way to Joe Allison's ranch, where they went through the process of washing the blood from their hands. The father and squaw of Frank were met at the ranch, but were unmoved by the particulars of the tragedy.

A Red Man Riddled With Bullets.

A Eureka dispatch of the 14th conveys the following:

Advices from Pioche give the particulars of a tragedy at Pannea, in which an Indian was shot to pieces. He had shot a dog and was riding off, when two men pursued him, one of whom was shot in the leg by the Indian and fell from his horse. A party of horsemen, who saw him fall and believed him killed, rode after the Indian, and on overtaking him, riddled him with bullets.

Faster Time Demanded.

[S. F. Call.]

In round numbers the distance between San Francisco and Omaha is 2,000 miles, but this distance is made to seem relatively greater by the slow time made over the road. The Union Pacific controls a little more than one-half of the distance, and that company is understood to have been the principal objector to suggestions frequently made that the rate of speed be increased. The government directors of the Union Pacific have now added the force of their advice to the suggestion of the public, and a company that would not listen to one may pay heed to the other. The directors say that the opening of competing lines, north and south, makes it necessary for the company to take some steps to maintain the advantage it now has in the passenger business. The directors recommend that the through time between San Francisco and Omaha be reduced from thirty-six to twenty-four hours. The principal objection to the proposed increase of speed is on the score of expense. The cost of doing a certain amount of business at a twenty-five mile rate of speed is greater than at a fifteen-mile rate. A slow rate made little difference in the amount of business to be done while there was no opposition, but with a line already in operation on the south and one nearly completed on the north, some effort will be required to retain anything like the passenger travel these roads have hitherto possessed. The government, besides speaking for the people, has a direct pecuniary interest in preserving the value of the two lines of railway.

A Lucky Fall Down Stairs.

Mrs. Jones, of Gold Hill, mother to Senator John P Jones and S. L. Jones, was for many months afflicted with a distressing affection of the stomach, from which she suffered greatly. A short time ago, while on the second floor, she started to go into a closet, as she thought, but opened the door leading to the staircase, instead. Not noticing her mistake she walked off the landing and fell violently to the bottom of the steps, inflicting upon herself some painful bruises, but sustaining no other injuries. Before she had scarcely recovered from her shaking up, she began to experience a change of health in another direction that more than compensated her for a temporary lameness, for lo and behold, her stomachic troubles had left her, and in their place came a healthy appetite, with a vigorous digestion, that gives the good old lady a new lease of life. She does not know to what to attribute this change unless it be her lucky accident on the stair tops. Similar cases are said to have been known before.—Enterprise, 6th.

Reno has a bull that has proved the terror of the town. Recently it showed its hoodlum tendencies by goring an unfortunate Chinaman to death. Its latest exploit was to break the arm and seriously damage its owner, State Senator P. N. Marker of Washoe. When the bull charged on him he grasped a pitchfork, and put the tines through the brute's nose, but this device did not save him from general demoralization. The best place for this animal would be on the southern border. It would be more effective on an Apache trail than a whole squad of cavalry.—S. F. Chronicle.

THE PRESIDENT'S VISITORS.

Some of the People Who Called Upon Him One Afternoon.

[Washington Sunday Herald.]

President Arthur has a very direct way of dealing with his callers. Any one who has any real business to transact will never have any difficulty in securing an interview. From 1 until 2 P. M. he gives up to unofficial callers. These visitors are received in the library, a long, oval-shaped room west of the room where the Cabinet meetings are held. One day last week I sat in this library and watched the President as he passed his callers in review. He receives them all with great simplicity and directness. His manner is more that of a man of the world than a politician. He tells the plain truth to his callers. Where he can help he does. Where no hope can be given he tells the disagreeable but wholesome truth with a politness and kindness that soften the harshness of a refusal. The President first shakes hands with the people who come to pay him merely their respects. Then he walks about and talks with his business callers, who are seated upon a line around the room. He sits down with no one. He walks up to each with a polite question of inquiry, and for the moment he devotes his entire attention to the person addressed. He has a good humor and a vein of satire in his talks with his visitors that give great variety to the interviews. He is always faultlessly dressed. The only color in his dark morning attire is a red rose in his button-hole. His manner is always polite to every one. He only becomes brusque when a request made is so manifestly improper as to be classed as impertinent.

Here are a few interview sketches taken during my morning's observations:

A lady in bottle-green arises with a black mantel over her arm. A small black hat comes down over a low forehead, while a black speckled veil half covers an ordinary, small-featured face. She whispers a request to the President who has to bow to catch her meaning.

"Yes," said he, "I understand. You want me to recommend you for promotion."

"Yes, you have letters from Gen. Grant and others. I have no doubt of it. You have enough without any word from me."

"Yes, I know you have recommendations. My dear madam, I have seen cases where recommendations were piled up as high as this White House, and I could do nothing. Do you think this is a matter for me to consider? How can I know your merits?"

She still persists.

"Madam, when I came into this office, out of good nature I did recommend A, B, C, and D, for promotion. Nothing came of it. What would be the amazement of my Secretaries if I should now all at once insist upon the promotion of E."

She continues to insist, and the President is forced to walk on to get rid of her.

Here is the way a fresh office seeker meets his fate: He was a small man, who belonged to the type of men who cannot carry on a conversation with one without standing between the feet and leaning up against the man addressed. The President backed away from the man until he consented to talk at a reasonable distance. After he had related his wishes the President said:

"What you ask of me is very simple. It is only to turn out a good, honest, tried man, who performs his duty, and put in you, about whom I know nothing. Of course, I have no time for anything else but to consider just such cases as this."

The little man looks very uncomfortable, and begins a wriggling apology.

The President stops him. "I dare say," he says, "you do not like this way of putting it. It is disagreeable for you. Well, it is also unpleasant to me to be compelled to say these things. But I will not turn out good men without any reason. This may seem strange to you."

The little man turns to go, and the President nods pleasantly to him to keep him from swooning from disappointment, as he says: "Your turn may come some time." This caller has found out something positive in one way. Early decisions make savings in hotel bills at Washington.

To one group of callers the President says:

"You gentlemen come here every day to make the same argument. Perhaps if you would remain away one day I might find time to make a decision in your case. As it is you take up all the time that can be given to it with your talk."

One pale-faced young woman, with a slight black mustache shading a thick-lipped, vulgar mouth, stood up with languishing impertinence, and said a certain distinguished gentleman had told her to come to the President for a letter recommending her for an appointment in the Departments.

The President did not even look at this caller. He stood like stone as she talked. When she had concluded he said. "I never write letters recommending people for appointment in the Departments. I am not in the habit of indorsing people whom I do not know for no reason at all." This was said in a voice distinct enough to be heard by every one in the room.

To a hook-nosed, sharp-eyed, gray-mustached, rotund German he said. "You were here yesterday, the day before, every day for a week. Are you coming to-morrow? What are your plans? your case has reached a certain point. No talk can advance it beyond that point until the Secretary of the Treasury acts."

"But he is sick. I appeal to you."

"I do not know one word about it. Do you want me to go to Mr. Folger's bedside and sit down with him and tell about your case?"

The German remonstrated.

"What is to be done?" said the President. "The Secretary is sick. I am sorry for that. But neither you nor I can help that. You must wait until he is well. You are in the face of a misfortune, and you must grin and bear it."

"But," said the German, with a desperation almost pathetic, "I have grinned for seventeen months, and can bear it no longer."

I have given the cases where refusals made cover general principles of the methods of the President. He will not interfere with the legitimate workings of the Departments. He will not turn out good men from office. He cuts short all impertinent requests, and puts every caller at once upon a plain, common-sense business footing.

Beyond the River.

Away Across the Mississippi Is Held a Convincing Conversation.

"I tell you sir, that they are one of the neatest combinations ever produced, and my experience of that sort of thing has been wide enough to entitle my judgment to some respect."

"Oh, I don't know," responded the first speaker's friend, with a little yawn, as though he didn't take much interest in the subject, "I have never been able to see much difference in those things. They are all pretty nearly the same size, and made of about the same stuff."

The talk, of which the foregoing is a fragment, took place in Gallatin, Missouri, not long ago, in the sanctum office of Dr. M. P. Flowers, one of the leading physicians of the State, who followed up the vein in which he had introduced it substantially in these words

"Nonsense, that is the rigmarole of a boy, or rather a man who either doesn't know or doesn't care what he says. Those things, as you call them, are just as different as the moon is from green cheese. Now, liniments, lotions and ointments are very good in most cases for the relief of pain or inflammation. But, in the first place they are unclean. They soil the hands and the linen, besides being always out of reach when they are most wanted."

"Well, my dear Doctor," sighed the traveler from the North, "what would you have? This is a wretched world anyhow, and nothing is ever at hand when it is wanted. You can't suggest anything——"

"Yes, I can," broke in the Doctor, thumping the table with his fist, "I can suggest, BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER. I have tried it on my patients, and I have tried it on myself for an attack of pneumonia, and in all cases relief has followed in from three to forty-eight hours. The old plasters are stage coaches—the Capcine is a telegraphic dispatch. For instance, in cases of Neuralgia, Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, retarded action of the Kidneys, and——"

"I give it up, Doctor, and in case of need I'll buy Benson's," said the traveler, pleasantly.

In the center of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE.

A California Conscience

A heavy gold ring, with its owner's initials—"A S L."—was stolen in the early days of San Francisco. For thirty years the thief's conscience allowed him to keep it The owner, A S Leamed, became a resident of Nevada and for several years he has been one of our best citizens Last week a letter with San Francisco postmark reached Austin addressed to him It contained on opening only the stolen ring, only this and nothing more Mr Leamed was pleased to recognize and receive his ring

The Coombs Case.

The Appeal says "the feeling on the streets when the result was known was one of general surprise that any one on the jury could have for an instant entertained the idea that a simple assault and battery had been committed, and the jurors were roundly denounced The case will now have to be tried over again at an expense of at least $5,000 Judge Edwards says that it will not be again tried in this county and a change of venue will be allowed"

Next Trial of Coombs.

The Carson Tribune says it is generally expected that the next trial of Coombs, for the killing of Ross, will be had in Douglas county, as that comes under the jurisdiction of District No 2, and Judge Edwards being well advised of all matters connected with the first trial, will be the better prepared to sit at the second.

Satin has not gone out of vogue.

THE INSANE ASYLUM

A Woman Visits the Institution and Relates What She Saw There—The New Board's Ideas of Economy Exemplified—Two Men Doing the Work of the Former Superintendent—Ditto the Former Steward.

EDITOR ENTERPRISE—Sir: Though almost a stranger in this mountainous, sandy State, still I have been here long enough to become an admirer of your excellent paper, and through it desire to express a woman's views of passing events.

I shall gravitate at once to the Asylum matter, as that is still the theme among nearly all talkers. We have had the pleasure of visiting this institution under the present administration, as well as under that of Dr. Dawson, and deem it but just to taxpayers of our State that they should hear from a disinterested party some of the things seen and heard.

While there has been but a little more than one week of Drs Bishop and Bergstein's management, yet an observing, thoughtful person can tell something of what it promises to be Dr. Bishop seems a little awkward yet in the new position, but this will wear off in time He is genial and polite to strangers, though too reserved to impress one with a frank straightforwardness, which one hopes to find in the Superintendent of such an institution

We found Dr Bergstein all bustle and animation over the fitting up of suitable quarters for himself and family This has been effected by taking the sunny, bay window dry room of Ward A for his office, and using the old office for a parlor for his own use This and the adjoining room have been elegantly furnished I did not learn why the carpeted sunny rooms formerly occupied by the Assistant Superintendent were not good enough for the present incumbent, nor did the parties who showed us around seem to understand the economy of this new arrangement We found the wards clean and the patients neat and tidy. A few of the poor creatures were restless and uneasy, wanting to know what they had done and why they were kept here What a wreck humanity presents when reason is dethroned They who think their trials are many, and who are ever ready to find fault with trivial hindrances in carrying to completion and success some cherished plan, should go through these wards and if they do not come forth with the sweet incense of true thankfulness upon their lips and an earnest prayer welling from the heart, for forgiveness for ever murmuring at their condition, they will fail to experience what I experienced

We finally reach the dining room, where some twenty eight patients (women) were eating There seemed to be an abundance of attention given them, as the Matron and her two assistants, with the two ward attendants, were all there supplying their every want Right here we were told of one new employe, the Matron's second assistant. We then asked if there had been any increase in the number employed by Dr Dawson, and were told that the office had one more man—Hon Walter Marsden, book keeper This position, we learn, was filled in the past by Dr Dawson's assistant—Dr C B Martin We came near asking our kindly guide why the Honored Board of Commissioners had considered it a matter of economy to employ an Assistant Superintendent who would have almost nothing to do, and supply a new man with a position which in the past was wholly filled by the Assistant Superintendent—Dr Martin. But fearing we might be considered inquisitive we stilled the thousand questions our woman's nature put in our heart to say, and were compelled to put our own construction on their proceedings, and can suggest only one way in which we think they justified themselves, viz That it takes two doctors of the present Board's selection to make one of the old Again, we found two men under the present management filling the place of the Steward under Dr Dawson One at $90 a month, the other at $45 a month

This is another economical (?) conundrum which the Board should either be compelled to solve to the satisfaction of taxpayers, or admit they care nothing for the financial interest of the State, a position they have forced upon all careful thinking people Thus you see three new employes are needed (?) under the present regime Some one should now explain wherein the old administration was extravagant I know that a woman is not expected to be able to weigh impartially such abstruse and complex schemes for the saving of money as our worthy Board have weighed, but by virtue of the weakness wonderful and high toned of their action in removing two faithful, efficient officials, Dr Dawson and his assistant my heart aches for the poor insane of this State, whose home must be in an institution fathered by men wanting in those high and noble principles, which constitute true manhood, and who compose a part of the present Board of Commissioners for the Insane Truly, Nevada politics is a moral monstrosity, without heart or conscience living on corruption and intrigue, which shames every true man and woman throughout our entire State But the press of the State have done nobly in condemning this outrageous affair, and through them, and to them alone, can we look to educate and lift to higher planes of thought and action the voters who place in power those who govern our State institutions RUTH

Reno, Nevada, April 12.

A. O. U. W.

The Grand Lodge of A. O. U. W will meet at Eureka on the 8th of May There are in this jurisdiction 1,700 members These are in Montana, Utah and Nevada. Idaho is also in the same jurisdiction, but there are as yet no lodges in that Territory.

Rifle Inspectors

The San Francisco Chronicle says "a special session of rifle inspectors was held Monday night at the Palace Hotel. Colonel Charles Sonntag, Inspector-General N. G. C. presided. Lieutenant Governor Laughton, Adjutant-General of Nevada, was in attendance, having come all the way from Carson City expressly for that purpose. Eight out of the twelve inspectors were also present The conference was rather informal, including various topics of more or less interest to the militia. The idea of the establishment of a rifle range to be exclusively owned and controlled by the National Guard was unanimously approved and is likely to soon assume some more definite shape. It was decided to send a team of ten riflemen to compete with the Nevada team in the coming interstate shooting match. The trophy to be awarded to the successful team on that occasion is a bronze horn, valued at $300, and it will be hung in the office of the Adjutant-General of the winning State In the two former contests the honors were divided, the Nevada team being victorious two years ago, but only to be defeated last year by the sharpshooters of California. The result of the coming match will be awaited with interest by the military in both States The Nevada team is already organized, and contests among the local riflemen will soon be begun for the honor of a place in the team from California
